To manage trading risks effectively, agricultural stakeholders need regular information on market developments, including supply and demand, trading conditions, price trends, and so on. We adapt our publication schedule to the business cycles of each sector, based on three simple criteria:

- During periods of intense commercial activity, we publish the bulletins every week for sectors with volatile prices.
- During periods of low commercial activity, we publish the newsletters each month to provide information on the past campaign and the preparation of the upcoming campaign in addition to the low commercial activity currently underway.
- Sectors with more-or-less stable prices throughout their marketing cycle benefit from a monthly newsletter.

Publications are weekly during the marketing campaigns for Cashew (Feb-June + Nov-Dec), Sesame (Nov-Feb), Shea (Sept-Dec) and Gum Arabic (January-April). They move at a monthly rate outside the campaign.

For Peanut, Rice and Maize, the publications remain monthly throughout the year.

*For Cocoa, we may stop publishing in the near future in order to focus on another commodity, in particular the soybean market.
